

eye flat, green, closely folded together. This variety has been long cultivated in Ireland, though little known in this country: its conspicuous appearance and good qualities, however, justly entitle it to a place in every collection.

The following is a list of the plants which are now growing in the garden of the Royal Botanic Society, London, in the year 1818. The list is arranged in alphabetical order, and is intended to give a general idea of the state of the garden at present. The plants are all of the best quality, and are all of the latest importation. The list is given for the information of the public, and is not intended to be a complete catalogue of the garden.
